

Hygiene Policy

Swanline Print products currently include screen print, litho lamination and digital conversion for point of sale units, supply of bespoke paper and board and packaging to the food, pharmaceutical and consumer markets.

It is therefore our intention to attain and maintain the packaging and packaging materials modules of the BRCGS Standard. We implement, maintain, monitor and continually improve the system - which will be audited internally as specified within the standard, and externally by an independent accreditation body to ensure hygiene standards are maintained.

We shall support our customers by exercising due diligence and taking all reasonable precautions to prevent problems, such as hazards being introduced into the food, pharmaceutical and consumer goods chain from the manufacture, packing process and supply of our finished products. To ensure that hazards are assessed and controlled a HARM manual has been created and a study carried out to provide a schedule of prerequisites and critical control points.

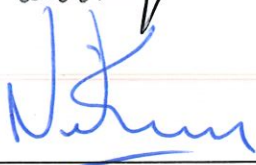

All necessary resources, procedures and structures necessary to comply with the BRCGS standard will be provided by the management team along with the continued support and co-operation of all our employees.

This document is complementary to the quality certified system already operational at Swanline Print, and in keeping with this standard the requirements of the BRCGS standard will be communicated monthly via management meetings, and to all personnel throughout the organisation via newsletters and email. The system will be reviewed annually and earlier if required.
